Australia

Immigration Detention Centers (IDCs) in Australia
- Woomera, in the Australian desert, 500 km north of Adelaide. A center that has successively served as a military outpost, a rocket launching pad and a communications center between NASA and its astronauts on the moon. Over 40 degrees Celsius in the shade. A camp surrounded with barbed wire, holding around 800 prisoners who came mainly from Iran, Pakistan and Afghanistan to seek asylum in Australia. The Woomera center is the largest and most inaccessible of the six detention centers for immigrants to Australia. Several times, the establishment has been struck by riots, hunger strikes and self-mutilations by the detainees. The majority must wait for over two years of forced detention before receiving an answer to their asylum request. Detainees have to work to pay the bare minumum: 10 hours of work are paid 8 "points," a tiny bottle of shampoo costs 4 points. Children are born here, while others grow up behind a fence. Woomera is one camp of six, which together hold a total of over 3000 prisoners. For 10 years, Australia has been the only country in the world to practice compulsory detention for asylum seekers.

Finland

detention centers
- Vainikkala After thousands of refugees from Somalia came to Vainikkala during a short period of time in 1990, the Finnish officials have with the help of unofficial agreements succeeded in getting the Russian border officials to ensure that no one enters into Finland without a Finnish visa. The paranoid machinery built by the Soviet Union has therefore been harnessed for the use of the racist refugee policy of the European Union. The cooperation is important for the officials because according to the international refugee agreements any refugee at the Finnish border has a right to apply for asylum, so it is an international norm. In fact, the president of Russia, Boris Jeltsin, in recent years Finland has systematically refused to allow visas for Chechens or any other Caucasians. This is against the spirit of the Geneva refugee convention, which should be prevented from entering a country on the basis that there is a possibility of this person applying for asylum.

The BI 9000™ Series
Keeping Watch Over Curfew Compliance
As America's prison population grows, corrections agencies are focusing on community-based sanctions. Today, approximately 70% of offenders reside within the community. To manage this growing population, criminal justice professionals need a reliable monitoring system. The BI 9000 Home Escort Series™ is designed to help agencies with this task.

HomeGuard™ 200 Today, approximately seven out of ten offenders are not behind bars, but reside within our neighborhoods. Criminal justice professionals have an increasing need for reliable and effective sanctions for offenders released into the community. In response to this need, BI presents HomeGuard™ 200, the most advanced radio frequency monitoring system available.

Corrections Corporation of Australia

(2001) In Europe and in Australia, Sodexho provides services for a total of 17 establishments. SIGES (Société d'investissement et de gestion des services), a branch of Sodexho, has invested in 8 prisons in France, including 5 detention centers (Argentan, Châteauroux, Châteaudun, Nieuvic, Uzerche) and 3 jails (Bois d'Arcy, Chartres, Nanterre). Its contracts run from food services (its specialty, a market evaluated at 5.5 billion euros) to maintenance and security, by way of cleaning, teaching, employment, training, transportation, health care... SIGES today earns 1% of the Sodexho group's total turnover, i.e. 49 millions euros; but it estimates the market of 2,500,000 incarcerated persons in the Western countries to have a value of 45.6 billion euros. It takes part in each stage of the prisoner's incarceration, from condemnation onward: it employs prisoners, feeds them, furnishes them with canteen products, "cares" for them, washes their clothes, trains them, helps them return to society, surveys them...

Corrections Corporation of America

Leader of the private market in the USA, CCA has approximately 72,000 beds and currently houses 55,000 inmates in 63 facilities under contract for management in 26 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Australia and the United Kingdom.

Group 4 have the biggest piece of the immigration pie, making millions out of the sufferings of migrants and refugees.They have just opened a new prison in Bloemfontein (South Africa), with spaces for 2,928 prisoners. It is believed that the next project, a new central prison for Lesotho, will be even bigger, with 3,500 beds.
Premier Custodial Group manages five British prisons, plus a Secure Training Center for persistent young offenders. It has contracts for prison escort and court custody services, and runs two areas for the electronic monitoring of offenders in England and Wales. Wackenhut, which describes itself as a world leader in this growing industry, has already won contracts to manage more than fifty prison, detention and mental health facilities in North America, Europe, Australasia, New Zealand and South Africa.
Premier Detention Services have the contract for transporting dispersed asylum seekers throughout the UK and transporting detainees captured by 'Immigration Snatch Squads' to detention centers and prisons.They also transport removees from prisons and detention centers to airports and ports.

The Wackenhut Corporation boasts a yearly turnover of 2.2 billion USD, with a 23% increase in 1999; it controls 55% of the non-American market. For such companies, looking to grow beyond the United States, the bridgehead to penetrate the European market is naturally the United Kingdom.The trend to privatization is strongly influenced by the Adam Smith Institute and supported by the Home Affairs Committee since the latter conducted visits to the private American prisons, despite the protests from the Prison Officers Association, a few Labour MPs and organizations such as the Prison Reform Trust. Currently, some ten British prisons have been privatized, most often with the participation of an American company: the Agecroft prison is managed by the American firm Prison Realty Trust of Leavenworth, Kansas; the prisons of Doncaster, Lowdham Grange, Marchington, Medomsley and Pucklechurch in England, as well as the Kilmarnock in Scotland are run by the Wackenhut Corrections Corporation of Palm Beach Gardens, Florida, to name only a few cases.

It also promotes the reduction of birthrates in poor countries.

National Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Center (NLECTC)
- Office of Law Enforcement Technology Commercialization (OLETC)
- Office of Law Enforcement Standards (OLES)
- Border Research and Technology Center (BRTC)
- Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Advisory Council (LECTA)

Office of Science and Technology (OS&T)
The mission of the Office of Science and Technology (OS&T) is to furnish federal, state and local penitentiary and law-enforcement agencies access to the best available technologies and to help them improve their skills and efficiency in all aspects of the criminal justice system, while avoiding the unnecessary duplication of programs. The OS&T is a central organ for the development of norms, experimentation and evaluation, and distribution of information on law-enforcement technologies and equipment. The National Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Center (NLECTC) is an OS&T program that supplies professionals of the criminal justice system (law enforcement, penitentiary establishments and courts) with information on technologies, directives and norms for their use, experimental data, and scientific and technical support for deployment. The organization of the NLECTC includes a national center in Rockville, Maryland, as well as four regional centers and four specialized offices.
● The Office of Law Enforcement Technology Commercialization (OLETC): created as recently as 1995, its mission is to develop a national program to promote the commercialization of technological innovations used by law-enforcement and penitentiary agencies. The objective of the OLETC is to allow researchers and private enterprises to meet in order to make affordable, market-oriented technologies available to the relevant agencies. The OLETC actively solicits private companies for the commercialization of technologies based on the needs identified by the National Institute of Justice.
● The Office of Law Enforcement Standards (OLES), established in 1971 by a Memorandum of Understanding between the departments of Commerce and Justice, its essential mission is to define minimum norms of performance and technical reports.
● The Border Research and Technology Center (BRTC) works on the development of technologies adapted for use by immigration, border surveillance and anti-drug forces (for example, systems for the detection of presence on the SENTRI system – Secured Electronic Network for Travelers' Rapid Inspection).
● The Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Advisory Council (LECTAC) is the counselling organ of the NLECTC created to identify technological needs and equipment for law enforcement and penitentiary establishments. The technologies are developed jointly, for military and civilian entities, by the Department of Defense (and the National Institute of Justice, within the framework of the "Joint Program Steering Group" (JPSG) which associates the DoD and the DoJ since 1994. They include the priority projects identified by the LECTAC and developed within the framework of the NLECTC's "Less-Than-Lethal-Technologies" program. The technologies are developed by private companies operating with grants from the NIJ.

STUN TECH Inc.

REACT, or the "Stun Belt"
REACT (Remote Electronically Activated Control Technology), also known as the "Stun Belt," is a product of STUN TECH Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio. It is a belt worn at the waist and equipped with two electrodes at the level of the left kidney. Using a remote control with a range of approximately 90 meters, the guard can inflict on the prisoner electric discharges of 50,000 volts for a duration of 5 seconds. When the device is activated, it cannot be stopped (the 5-second period cannot be reduced). The low amperage (3 or 4 milliamps) ensures, in principle, the avoidance of fatality. STUN TECH offers two versions: the High Security Transport Belt (HSTB), used for the transportation of dangerous prisoners and as a complement to more classical instruments of retention (handcuffs, chains), and the Minimal Security Belt (MSB), used particularly for the appearance of prisoners before the courts. STUN TECH claims to have sold 1400 belts in the United States and to dominate 90% of the American market. The NOVA Products firm of Cooleville, Tennessee, is number 2 in the market, with its product RACC (Remote Activated Custody Control).
In the Old Parish Prison in New Orleans, Louisiana, the Stun Belt is systematically affixed to all prisoners with the HIV virus, who are additionally relegated to a high-security quarter, whatever their level of aggressiveness. In El Paso county, Colorado, the Sheriff considers the Stun Belt as a "level 1 device," like handcuffs.

MACE SECURITY INC

TG GUARD ® System
MACE SECURITY INC. sells a device for the release of incapacitating gas, destined for use in prisons.The TG GUARD ® System is composed of a network of jets distributed throughout the prison (compressed air cylinders connected to automatic sprinklers installed in the ceiling in case of fire) and controlled electronically from a console situated in an observation room. When a security officer observes trouble in a prison zone – whether from a window or through a CCTV video network – he can use his control panel to almost automatically command the dispersal of an incapacitating chemical agent such as tear gas into the desired zone.An added colorant can be mixed with the chemical agent to mark the troublemakers for later identification.

SARA

Unidirection Infrasound Acoustic Weapon
SARA(Scientific Applications and Research Associates)
http://www.sara.com/
The human ear responds to a range of frequencies between 20 and 20,000 hertz.The research on acoustic weapons deals with infrasounds, i.e. frequencies below the threshold of audibility for human beings. Researchers estimate that vibrations of very low frequency – an infrasound of around 16 hertz, but of very high intensity – could cause nausea, disorientation, disturbances of vision, or even internal lesions, with effects from temporary discomfort to death, in extreme cases. One must nonetheless observe that such devices have long been rendered impossible by unresolvable technical problems.The size of a loudspeaker is proportional to the intensity of the sound to be produced, and inversely proportional to the wave length of the frequency of the sound.The effects sought in the domain of non-lethal weapons, using intense infrasound, would therefore require immense loudspeakers consuming large quantities of energy.This problem has recently been overcome by the American Technology Corp. of San Diego, California, which, in cooperation with the Naval Post Graduate School in Monterey, California, has just developed a technique of sound generation dubbed Hypersonic Sound, which uses the air as a resonating surface in place of a loudspeaker with a vibrating membrane. The process consists in generating two ultrasounds of slightly different frequencies (200,000 and 200,150 hertz, for example).These two signals, inaudible for the human ear, combine to create two additional signals, one with a frequency equal to the sum of the frequencies of the two original signals, the other equal to the difference of the two originals (which, in our example, would gives frequencies of 400,150 et 150 hertz). While the high-frequency signal rapidly dissipates in the atmosphere, the low-frequency signal persists and can be directed precisely toward a group of individuals.

Planned Parenthood of America
PPA is the mother society (founded in 1942) of all the sex-education groups in the world.The ideas of Margaret Sanger, its founder, have been adopted by organizations such as the Population Council, founded in New York in 1952, or the International Planned Parenthood Federation, established in Bombay the same year.These different organizations have received the support of the Rockefeller, Ford, and Carnegie foundations, etc., which have wholeheartedly adopted Mrs. Sanger's elitist and eugenicist vision.

"These agencies (USAID, Population Council, Rockefeller and Ford Foundation, UNFPA, WHO and various pharmaceutical agencies) are attempting to set the agenda for women's movements and organizations by co-opting their language to legitimize population-control policies. Although this co-optation played a very divisive role and confuses issues, many women around the world are resisting this." (Declaration of People's Perspectives on "Population" symposium, Bangladesh, December 12-15, 1993). The mainstream agencies are very clear why they want the number of people reduced in the South and why they must close down or have restrictions on the international borders. It is a security question for them, not a women's question.Therefore, making it an issue for demanding rights of women for deciding about reproduction, for having access to contraceptives, needs to be discussed outside the boundaries of UNFPA, Population Council, Rockefeller Foundations, etc. Women's questions must be discussed outside the paradigm of racism and militarization. That is, outside the paradigm of population control.

Alain Bauer and Xavier Raufer are the Trojan horses in terms of the police and penal theories that the United States is attempting to impose at international norms. In fact, the publisher and collaborator of Alain Bauer, Xavier Raufer (whose real name is Christian de Bongars, former neo-fascist militant in the Occident group, and member of the far right organization Ordre Nouveau), is himself known for his proximity to the American secret services.He was recruited by Georges Albertini in the 1970's to act as a liaison between Taiwanese authorities and French industrialists. Later, in the 1980's, he was a member of the National Strategy Information Center in Washington, a private think tank created by ex-CIA director William Casey, and presided by Roy Godson.

The first Scottish immigration detention center run by Premier Custodial Group is the Dungavel center in South Lanarkshire.
Human Rights groups have several concerns about the immrane barriers put up by Premier Detention Services when they attempt to visit,including the following:
1.Visitors are fingerprinted and photographed.
2.They cannot take mobile phones into the visiting area.
3.Refugees are not allowed to have mobile phones.
4.Visitors cannot give gifts of food or clothing to refugees.
5.There is no privacy for visitors or refugees. They do not have freedom of movement as every door is locked and security guards wander around like prison guards.

Two floors of the Hôtel Ibis in Roissy were rented to form a "retention center," as well as a number of rooms in the hotel at Orly.The rent for the two floors in Roissy came to 1.6 million francs per month. Via its construction branch, Accor was the builder of the new waiting zone, ZAPI 3.The Accor company uses Carlson Wagon lits to reserve seats in planes and trains for the expulsion of sans-papiers.

Group 4 Falck and Amey Assets Services, a UK company, have signed a contract with the UK Immigration Service for the design, construction and management of a new immigration center at Thurleight near Bedford.The center will be built by Amey Asset Services and, following construction, will be managed by Group 4 Falck.The new contract strengthens the group's position within public-private partnerships in the UK.Scheduled to open in April next year, the center will have facilities for 900 immigration applicants and will have 300 employees.
The contract runs for a term of six years and involves annual turnover of 218 million Danish Kroner (29.4 million euros). The contract can be extended. Group 4 Falck already operates two other immigration centres in the UK, one at Campsfield House and one at Oakington.

The decision to keep someone in a waiting zone must be taken by "the chief of service of border control or by a functionary designated by him, possessing at least the rank of inspector." The same rules apply to decisions of refusal of entry to the territory. The decision to keep someone waiting most be written, with an explanation. It is inscribed in a register to which the Procureur de la République has access upon demand.
Persons can be kept waiting for a maximum duration of forty-eight hours, once renewable under the same conditions. After four days, the waiting period can only be prolonged, for a maximum of eight days, by order of the president of the Tribunal de Grande Instance.
The Office des Migrations Internationales is present in the waiting zone, at the Roissy and Orly airports, by the intermediary of one or more agents whose role is to bring humanitarian aid to waiting foreigners. Access to the waiting zone by the HCR delegate or his representatives is dependent on an individual agreement delivered for a period of one year by the Minister of the Interior, after consultation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The agents of the PAF (police of the air and frontiers) number 7000 persons for the surveillance of all borders; 240 functionaries are devoted to the surveillance of the Franco-German border. But it is true that the gendarmerie and the customs department also participate in surveillance of the border area.
In France, migratory pressure is felt above all in the ports with high levels of passenger traffic: Marseilles and Calais. The PAF refuses admission to clandestines and requires their immediate return whenever possible.The law of July 6, 1992, instituted waiting zones in all ports, airports and train stations, which allow clandestines to be detained the time necessary to obtain documents for their transportation to the border.

Juxtaposed National Customs Control Offices have been installed on the Franco-German border. This arrangement officializes three already existing structures (Strasbourg–Pont-de-l'Europe, Sarrebrück, Ottmarsheim/Neuenburg) and creates a fourth (Lauterbourg/Bienwald).The police station of Pont-de-l'Europe, in Strasbourg, includes officers from the Police de l'Air et des Frontières (PAF) and police from the Bundesgrenzschutz (B.G.S.), i.e. the federal border police.

The Franco-Spanish agreement of June 3, 1996, officialized the existing police station of Perthus/La Junquera and created three new shared stations: Pont-du-Roy/Melles, Biriatou/Irun et Carlranz/Urdos.

The example of the reinforcement of the German police forces charged with border control (the B.G.S.) in the border zone with France is revealing: the increase in the number of officers dealing with immigration and border controls has allowed for exponential growth (+85% in 1997) in the return of unauthorized foreigners to France, at the shared police station in Strasbourg. Overall, according to the official statistics, Germany assigns 20,000 police functionaries to missions of border and immigration control. 12,100 are assigned to land borders, 5100 to aerial borders and 2800 to maritime borders. These figures include the B.G.S. and other corps, such as the Bavarian police, for example. The exterior border with Poland and the Czech Republic is watched by 6200 functionaries, while1000 are deployed along the interior borders, including some 500 at the border with France.

The cooperation centers for police and customs (C.C.P.D.) organize, on the French side, the participation and shared competence of the national police, the national gendarmerie, and customs officials.The centers are at the disposal of all the services responsible for police and customs missions, particularly in order to fight against "illegal immigration, border delinquency, threats to public order and illicit trafficking." A cooperation agreement was also signed on October 3, 1997, with Italy, in view of the creation of two cooperation centers the first at Ventimille, in place of the current shared station, the second at Modane train station on French territory. The opening of these two Franco-Italian cooperation centers should not lead to the closure of the Juxtaposed National Customs Control Offices at Ventimille-autoroute, because the latter help repress certain kinds of smuggling (cigarettes, drugs, counterfeit goods) as well as clandestine immigration.
